MOTION FILED IN GALION BANK SUIT GRANTED

Federal Judge Approves Request for Realignment of Defendants.

NEW NAMES ARE ADDED

Hearing in $206,000 Action Not Likely Until December Court Term.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, O., April 18—Order of Federal Judge Paul Jones granting the motion of A. E. Evensen, receiver of the defunct Citizens' National bank at Galion, O., to realign parties in the $206,000 suit brought by Mary Volk, former cashier, against five directors of the bank, was recorded in federal court here today.

Attorneys for the receiver made application to Judge Jones just before court adjourned late yesterday for an immediate ruling on the motion. The court ordered the motion sustained and requested Evensen to file an amended bill of complaint.

Evensen's motion asked that he be made a plaintiff in the suit and that names of four other former directors be added as defendants. The receiver was listed as a defendant in the suit when it was transferred to federal court from common pleas court of Crawford county March 2.

Original Defendants

Directors named as defendants in the original suit filed by Miss Volk were James E. Casey, former president who is now serving a nine-year penitentiary sentence after having pleaded guilty to three federal indictments, Gilbert L. Stiefel, Frank W. Faber, Ernest F. Klopp and H. L. Bachelder.

New defendants who Evenson asked be named in the suit are L. M. Liggett Herman H. Hartman, Henry F. Eichorn, all of Galion, and Henry Gottdiener of Cleveland.

The ruling, federal court attaches pointed out today, means that Evensen must file an amended bill of complaint containing substantially the same allegations as the cashier's original suit. All of the defendants will be permitted to file answers to the new petition.

There is no possibility that the case will be called for trial during the June term of court, it is said.

SPANISH CIVIL WAR THREAT ELIMINATED

Catalonia Agrees Not To Take Up Arms in Fight for Independence.

By The Associated Press

MADRID, April 18—Catalonia's battle of independence will be fought by its orators in the halls of a national constitutional convention and not by soldiers on battlefields.

The new provisional government here today hailed the victory of three of its ministers, who, after an airplane flight to Barcelona, last night wrung from the Catalonian president, Colonel Francisco Macia, a pledge to submit separatist demands and demands for political autonomy to the projected constitutional convention, meanwhile cooperating with Madrid.

The accord reached at Barcelona removed the most pressing of the political problems facing the junta set up by Don Niceto Alcala Zamora, provisional president.

Colonel Macai at Barcelona announced the accord with Madrid from a government house balcony to a cheering crowd, informing them that it had been decided that the Catalonian republic would cease to exist for the time being but would bear the name "commonwealth of Catalonia," a unit in the Spanish Republican federation.

General Damaso Berenguer, who became premier of Spain when General Primo De Rivera relinquished power, last night gave himself up to police after reading in Madrid newspapers that the government wanted him to answer for his responsibility for execution of the two rebel leaders, Captain Fermyn Galan and Garcia Hernandez, last December.

Baker Willing To Head Democratic Ticket

By The United Press

CLEVELAND, April 18—Former Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker will not seek the presidential nomination, but neither would he refuse it should it come his way.

This was the general interpretation placed today on a statement by W. R. Gregory, Democratic county chairman, who has held conferences with Baker recently.

HE'S THE BOSS

Frank Crowe of Boise, Ida., (above) will act as general superintendent in charge of construction of the gigantic Hoover dam in the Colorado river canyon. For many years he was an engineer in the U. S. reclamation service. He was employed for the important dam project by Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco, a corporation formed by companies that pooled their resources because the undertaking was too immense for one to handle.

FIVE BURNED IN OIL WELL FIRE

Flaming Texas Gusher Takes One Life; Four Other Deaths Expected.

BLAZE BEYOND CONTROL

Company Workers and Officials Caught in Searing Blast.

By United Press

KILGORE, Tex., April 18— Fire raged today about the largest gusher in the new East Texas oil field and the six 10,000 barrel storage tanks adjoining it.

One man was fatally burned and four others were burned so severely they were not expected to live.

The Upchurch and Allen No. 2 Brightwell Well, a gusher of 60,000 barrels daily capacity, was ignited from flames which started in the battery of oil tanks. The blaze spread quickly to all equipment in the vicinity. It was believed to have started from a match carelessly tossed away by a smoker.

Far too big for fire fighting equipment from nearby towns, the blaze raged on unchecked today No other wells were in the immediate vicinity, so it was hoped to prevent the fire spreading wholesale destruction.

C. E. Upchurch, part owner of the well, was standing with R. C. Holcomb, a pipe line worker, when flames leaped from the oil tanks.

Upchurch's clothing was burned away by the first blast, and he was critically hurt. Holcomb saved his life by closing his eyes and mouth, keeping out the deadly fumes, and staggering to temporary safety. Later he was taken to a Kilgore hospital.

E. T. Greene, a workman, was taken to the Tyler hospital with Upchurch. His body was badly seared.

J. W. Smith, 35, pipe line worker, died of his burns in a Kilgore hospital.

It was feared other casualties had passed unnoticed in the confusion and excitement.

The giant producer blew it out of control early yesterday. Crews labored throughout the day, and finally brought it under control last night. A few minutes later flames burst from the oil tanks.

ALARM ON INCREASE

U. S. Withdrawal of Inland Protection Stirs Up Consternation.

By The Associated Press

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 18—Americans in the Puerto Cabezas district, harried by insurgent and outlaw attacks during the last week, were reported today by R. J. Salassi, local manager of the Standard Fruit company, to be evacuating their homes and business.

Their action followed killing of nine American citizens in this general area since Friday of last week, and receipt of a telegram from Alvin T. Rowe, American consul at Bluefields, warning that the United States government cannot undertake their general protection.

Mr. Rowe's telegram said:

"Advise Americans this government cannot undertake their general protection in Nicaragua with American forces. The state department recommends that Americans who feel insecure withdraw from the country or seek protection in coast towns, where they may be evacuated if necessary. Americans remain in Nicaragua at their own risk and must not expect protection from American forces."

The message has been received with consternation throughout this section, not only by Americans but by British citizens who feel their own problem of protection may be gravely complicated by the Washington government's decision.

Refugees from outside Puerto Cabezas say that the insurgents appear to be most interested in killing Americans and Jamaicans and in destroying American property. Although all is quiet here it is feared that as soon as naval protection is withdrawn the insurgents will attempt to overwhelm the local Nicaraguan national guard force, kill Americans and destroy all American property.

WOULD MAKE PRE-PAY STATION OF AGOSTA

New York Central Asks Permission of Commission To Withdraw Agent.

By International News Service

COLUMBUS, O., April 18—The New York Central Railroad company today applied to the state utilities commission for permission to withdraw its agent at its Agosta station, Marion county, and to change the station to a pre-pay station.

The company declared that the business now handled through the Agosta station can be taken care of through the La Rue station, 3.5 miles west of Agosta, without inconvenience to the public.

BEGINNING OF SIX-YEAR TASK

EXECUTIVES URGE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Seventy-Three Marion Industrial Leaders at Dr. Sawyer Civic Meeting.

A plea for Marionites to forget selfish interests long enough to think in terms of public spirit and general public betterment was made by speakers on the program of the fourth boost Marion meeting called by Dr. Carl W. Sawyer at White Oaks Farm last night. The meeting was attended by 73 officers, executives and directors of Marion industries.

Don A. Howard, secretary and treasurer of the Huber Manufacturing Co., made a plea for community interest in the place of personal gain.

Hits Pessimism

Urging Marionites to talk "booster talk" about the city instead of bemoaning business and industrial difficulties, Mr. Howard declared that Marion is hit by a "public spirit depression."

"We have everything here that a city of this size needs, but it's not made publicly known," Mr. Howard continued. "Many are too selfish to think in terms of public good."

After reiterating Mr. Howard's plea for a more general concern of Marionites in the city's welfare, George Whysall also urged Marionites to work with their public officials toward the city's good.

Five railroad executives pledged the active support of their respective roads to any program for the upbuilding and advancement of Marion and expressed their willingness to cooperate with Dr. Sawyer in the boost Marion movement.

Three Roads Represented

Executives who spoke last night include J. T. Gallagher of New York, manager of station service of the Erie railroad; George A. Dennis of Toledo, supervising

His condition is serious, but is not regarded as critical at City hospital. WILL PROBE COST OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Committee Forced To Investigate Reported Misuse of Protestant Funds

By United Press

NEW YORK, April 18—The New York World-Telegram today said foreign missions supported by protestant churches of the United States at an annual cost of $40,000,000 are undergoing a rigid and thorough investigation.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and a group of prominent laymen inaugurated the survey more than a year ago, the World-Telegram said, after it was intimated that some of the huge sums collected each year for the advancement of Christianity in foreign countries had been wasted or misused.

Twelve religious, education and medical leaders, each an expert in some particular branch of mission work, compose a commission which will leave here in October for a nine months study of missions in China, Japan, Burma and India, the paper said. They will submit their report to a joint committee of laymen representing seven leading protestant denominations on their return, according to the paper.

ALL EXCAVATORS FOR GIANT PROJECT TO BE MADE HERE

Local Product To Be Used in Transforming Boulder Canyon into Huge Lake for Power and Irrigation Purposes; Work To Take Six Years.

J. H. WATTERS, PRESIDENT, REPORTS ORDER

Mountain of Masonry To Back Up Colorado River for 115 Miles To Make World's Largest Artificial Lake; Building City, Railway First.

CONTRACT for furnishing all steam shovels to be used in the gigantic Hoover dam and power project in Boulder Canyon in Colorado has been let to the Marion Steam Shovel Co.

Word that the contract had been awarded the local company was received here yesterday afternoon from J. H. Watters, president of the company, who is now on the west coast. The order assures Marion a substantial increase in industrial activity in the immediate future.

While the full extent of the contract is not definitely known, it is certain to be a large order, as the project is the second largest engineering feat ever undertaken.

The contract was awarded the Marion company by Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco, general contractors for the project, according to word of the letting received in a telegram late yesterday afternoon by Alec Gibson, secretary and treasurer of the company. The message from Mr. Watters carried with it instructions to release the announcement exclusively to The Star.

Six Year Project

Local company officials are without details of the contract or knowledge of the number or size of shovels the project will require. When first deliveries will be made, and the length of the period the contract will cover are not known. The project is already under way and is expected to require six years for completion.

The requirement for equipment from the Marion factory will extend over a period of years, officials of the local company predict.

Additional information regarding the scope of the contract probably will not be obtained until Mr. Watters returns from the west coast, where he is visiting district offices of his company. His return is expected within the next few weeks.

The Hoover dam, probably more generally known as the Boulder dam, will be built by a group of six contracting firms known as Six Companies, Inc., which pooled resources to undertake the job.

Largest in World

The dam will be the largest in the world, and will create the world's largest artificial lake. The Colorado river, backing up before the huge mountain of masonry, will form a great reservoir 115 miles long, with a shore line of 550 miles, according to a recent description by an Associated Press writer. At high water, its surface will be 1,228 feet above sea level.

The power development will overshadow both Niagara Falls and Muscle Shoals. The former generates 850,000 horsepower for United States. Muscle Shoals ultimate development is put at 600,000 horsepower. The Hoover dam will generate between 1,000,000 and 1,300,000 horsepower.

Materials needed for the great dam are counted in the millions. There will be 3,000,000 yards of concrete masonry, requiring 5,000,000 barrels of cement and 10,000,000 pounds of reinforcing steel.

It will take four years to com-

Will contain 3,600,000 cubic yards of concrete masonry, requiring 5,000,000 barrels of cement and 10,000,000 pounds of reinforcing steel.

Will create world's largest artificial lake, a vast reservoir 115 miles long.

Its capacity of 30,500,000 acre feet of water would cover entire state of Connecticut to depth of 10 feet.

Will generate from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000 horsepower in its giant power plant. Power development at Niagara Falls in United States is 550,000 horsepower and Muscle Shoals 250,000.

PASSENGER LIMITED CRASHES INTO WRECK

Two Dead, 25 Hurt in Pennsylvania Rail Mishap Near Altoona.

By The Associated Press

ALTOONA, Pa., April 18—Roaring through the darkness, the Pennsylvania railroad's fast Panhandle limited plowed into a freight wreck east of here late last night, killing an engineman and a fireman, and injuring 25 passengers, one seriously.

Nine cars of a freight train were derailed near the eastern entrance of the Spruce Creek tunnel and before trainmen could flag the speeding New York-St. Louis passenger train, it was crashing through the freight cars.

The passenger locomotive, a combination baggage and smoking car, and a day coach left the rails. Scalded and mained, the fireman of W. J. Keane, engineman, and R. E. Lash, fireman, both of Harrisburg, Pa., were rescued from the wreckage.

Passengers were thrown from their seats, and screaming for the doors, were showered with glass as lights and windows were broken.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Pedestrians

THEY were such tiny tots to be trotting about alone, but there was no question but that they knew just where they were going. And wasn't the big brother (who honestly wasn't much bigger than a good-sized fifth) taking good care of the little girl? Grasping her firmly by the hand, the pair made splendid headway until they came to a street crossing and there the trouble began. Still holding the little miss tightly in his grasp, the lad looked up and down and halfway ventured a start but the car always looked too close and back to the curb they scampered. Somehow the drivers didn't seem to see, or maybe they didn't care, but none of them stopped or even slackened their speed, and the youngsters stood poised on tiptoe on the curbing. Finally a man, coming from the opposite direction, took in the situation in one glance, stopped on the opposite side of the street and called to the pair to "come on." And did they scuttle. Well, yes, if you ask me.

Fishing

WE honestly wish we were real, goodness gracious fishermen. Of course, like everything else, there are fishermen and fishermen, but after watching a gang of them one balmy day this spring, we decided that there is really no sport that seems to fill the bill quit like angling. We make no pretense at being a fisherman, except from observation, but from our point of vantage the life of a fisherman is a happy affair. A mossy bank, a sunshiny day, line, sinker and a hook baited with a plump worm which was sport enough to take a chance on being gobbled up by some unsuspecting fish in the name of good, clean fun, and what more could be asked? To be sure, there may be angles to it that we know nothing about and there's always a chance of falling in the river but from the sidelines it looks likes heaps of fun.

Commencement

AND then came the graduation day. It's in the air everywhere and everywhere one meets the sweet girl graduate. And there's something about her that makes one wish she would always be the sweet girl graduate to say nothing of wishing you were one yourself. It's just too heartrending to say nothing of the chances one takes of bringing on a nervous slump to even think of the sweet girl graduate of a couple of eras ago. Of course it was up to the class in those days just what sort of a background was afforded the group but it was just about unanimous that a home setting was the most effective. And then began the task of picking the best furniture in town. Folks with the best in the catalogue were left with just about a bed to sleep in and a couple of chairs until after the event, and the newlyweds saw their prize possessions carried out from under their very noses. There was a trick to getting it and usually the huskiest as well as the "senior" with the oiliest tongue made up the combination which turned the trick.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Heads an Emergency Expedition to Town.

J[illegible] reminded me irresistibly of an enraged gamecock as she faced his father and [illegible] his fiery edfense of his young. But he was so earnestly so lovable that I had [illegible] to keep from sweeping him into my arms and hugging him enthusiastically. I did not move, however, for two reasons. I knew that any show of affection would embarrass my son [illegible] and I also was keeping the agreement always in force between Dicky and me that neither parent should interfere with the other's discipline. This was distinctly Dicky's problem. I was in no way involved, and I meant to keep a strict policy of hands off.

It was difficult to remain neutral, however, for in Dicky's own [illegible] jargon he certainly had messed things up considerable. My heart sight of a child hurt always [illegible] his quick and tender sympathy and—also his equally quick [illegible] against the person responsible. But I knew that if he had taken a second thought, he would not have pursued the tactics with Hank which had brought Junior running to the other boy's defense, and which had made Hank sullen and rebellious. I could see his feelings plainly written in his face and [illegible]

With wifely intuition born of long experience with my Peter Pan, I knew that Dicky was welcoming the way out shown him by Junior, although his momentary reaction to the rebuke was one of anger at the child's impertinence. Had he been a father of the old school, Junior would doubtless have experienced a painful interview in the woodshed. But his great love for his boy, his strong sense of humor, and I hoped, also of justice, triumphed over his irritation and I was not surprised to see him smile down at his belligerent young son.

"Of course I believe both you and Hank son," he said, "and you're dead right. I wasn't fair. Sorry, Hank," turning to his nephew with the smile that I have never known man, woman or child to resist. "I'm sure it was an accident, but you'd better tell me how it happened."

"I was mad enough at him to burn him," he said slowly, and there welled up from my heart a great thankfulness at the boy's truth-telling. For Hank at Christmas time had been anything but frank.

"I can understand that," Dicky said as Hank hesitated. "What did he do, yell at you and make you burn the pants?"

A Delicate Situation

I wondered if Dicky was purposely testing the boy, for he had heard that first cry from Roderick, which had been. Now you've done it!' and it had preceded his yell of pain. But Hank's answer was prompt.

"No, he didn't make me burn 'em," he said. "It was this way, sir. The iron was too hot, and when I put it on the cloth it began to smoke right away. I jerked it off and Roderick yelled. 'Now you've done it!' And as he yelled he came flinging up—you know the way little kids are, always wanting to see something—and I turned around to tell him to get out, and I had the iron in my hand, and his arm was out pointing at the cloth, and I couldn't get the iron out of the way. I was awful mad at the iron, and him, and everything—because these are all the clean white pants I have—but I didn't burn him on purpose."

"That was just the way it was Dad," Junior hopped up and down in his excitement. "But what are the boys going to do now?"

Dicky went into action immediately.

"Boys, I'll give you five minutes to get into the clothes you wore down in the car. Junior, run down and tell Jim to bring the car around and leave it running. Madge, please telephone Bill Bates at Bridgehampton and tell him I'm coming over with the two boys for an emergency order of white flannel trousers. Also telephone the tailor over there. We may have to pin 'em up with safety pins or paper clips, but we'll get 'em. Now get going lads. I'll be seeing you."

He was out of the door at the last word, tugging at the cords of his bathrobe. Junior was already half way down the stairs, and I made my own departure speedy. But Bill's voice followed me out.

"Aunt Madge! May we go down and get into the car as soon as we're dressed?"

"Surely." I smiled to myself as I went down the hall to the telephone. I guessed what was back of the request. With the painful self-consciousness of adolescent youths they were frantic for fear Marion would return before they were attired as they thought they should be for the evening.

Hank's voice stopped my hand, raised to take down the telephone receiver.

Aunt Madge!"

His head was poked around his door and his eyes were big with appeal.

"Yes dear."

"When we come back, will Mary and the Underwoods be here?"

"Yes they ought to be here by then." I replied casually.

"Gee!" His invariable exclamation was flat and hopeless as he disappeared inside his door, and I stood still, my laughter muscles aching from repression, trying to find some way out for the distressed young nephews of my husband.

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

THE best day in the week. It is the day when there isn't any school, and when my father brings his wages home and my unkle and my grandfather pay their board, and there isn't any school. So me and Jubilee got up early and I let him down by his rope, and went down and got my work done, and the Lost Bag of Tripe was with the bunch, and when Red asted him what he was going to do with the string on the paint bucket, he said he was going to dast one of us to pull it when Banty's father was on the ladder. I told him he must think we are as soft in the bean as he is. He said he took the money over to Banty's father last night and he wouldn't take it. He told him he used to be a boy and boys had to have their fun. So the Lost Bag of Tripe was going to spend the money today.

I told him he was a crook if he did, and he said I ought to see what his father done to him. I'd be supprized, and he thought he had earnt the money. I told him if he didn't take the money home to his mother I would squeal on him, so he took it home whilst I was in feeding my face and the bunch were playing with the acting pole, and he came running back with two bits. His mother had gave him. She told him she was proud of him, and that she didn't believe any other boy in our bunch would have been so honest. So that is what we get for trying to make a crook straight.

When I was in feeding my face the girls came, and when I said we were going out past the poorhouse Younise asted if they might go, and I said I would be glad to have them, so maybe I am catching being a lire from my grandfather Feeble said. "Don't you wish April Blossom was going?" I said, I wished she was going to Texas. And then my mother said that was a pretty name, who was she. Feeble said she was a go-getter and had her eye on her son I wunk at Younise but she toosted her head and looked the other way.

We didn't have much fun. We dug up a lot of Sassafras and peeled it and tied the bark in little bunches and went to town and sold quite a lot of it for a nickel a bunch, but we spent the nickels as fast as we got them. I chaseted a flying squirrel but he could fly better than I could, and I was lookin up and stepped in a hollow place which was like stepping down a stair with. ut seeing it and bit my tongue. But when we got back to my house my mother gave us a loaf of hot bread to break up between us with butter on it and milk to drink so that it wasn't so bad after all. My grandfather says he is going to do some serious fishing next week. If he wasn't my grandfather I would hope he would fall in. I always have to clean the fish. People that sell and clean fishes for a living are entitled to less.

CHAPTER 42

Retribution

SORELY was I tempted at times, to take the risk and go out of hiding—taking Marjorie with me—without waiting for the arrest trial and condemnation of Chink Dorson.

But I resisted the temptation partly because the police were seeking a man answering to my appearance—on the evidence of the stationmaster at Witherby End—partly because I had not known Marjorie long enough to ask her to trust herself to me and partly because some weeks at least must elapse ere I could receive from Uncle a sufficient sum of money for the purposes of safe and distant flight as well as for the payment of Williams H William and his wife, who had to leave the Monastery suddenly for one night we three having a rendezvous in his wife's room Williams informed me as I entered that he had caught sight of the ugly face of James peeping round the end of the corridor.

"He'll have seen you come in too," said William, "and he'll wait for some time to catch you going out. So we'll postpone this conference and slide out of the window. When Jimmy gets tired of waiting he'll butt in here and get the surprise of his life."

Whereupon he unwound his strong knotted cord from beneath his dressing-gown slipped its steel hook over the inner window ledge and led the way to the turf 20 feet below.

Mrs. William then dropped the cord down to us and we reentered the house by way of the window of William's ground floor room.

Sure enough, James flung open the door and entered half an hour later and got, as William had said the surprise of his life.

Albeit desperately anxious I decided that so long as I was alive Marjorie was safe.

But I nevertheless took every possible precaution and exercised the most unceasing vigilance. Among the former were efforts to sow mutual distrust among the members of the gang to mystify and frighten them and to find faithful friends and a safe refuge for Marjorie.

This last I contrived to do after making one of those ridiculous mistakes the memory of which makes one blush with shame.

Having jumped—too quickly to the conclusion that the chief nursing sister was none other than Frisco Fanny and wife of Charters I soon discovered that she was one of the noblest and finest of women and that her brother, who was vicar of Herepath a neighboring village, was in every way her twin.

At my wit's end I paid a visit to this man, summed him up for what he was and then having revealed myself to him, laid before him the naked truth and then asked:

"Do you believe me and will you help?"

His reply was:

"I do believe you and I will help."

"Then" said I "will you tell your sister everything that I have told you and that you are absolutely convinced that every word of it is true?"

"I will. But why not do that yourself?" he said.

"Because I replied, 'she would listen with patience, pat my hand with kind sympathy and see that I had a good bromide sleeping draught that night . . .

"You see' I added, "I have been at some pains to acquire a reputation as a harmless lunatic."

Laurence Weldon smiled.

"Of course" he said "You're the 'madman' of whom my sister has told me diverting stories. D'you know, I absolutely forgot all about that, as soon as you started telling me your history."

"You're in no doubt now," I smiled in return.

"None whatever. Nor will my sister be—when I've finished talking to her. It will be a most frightful shock to her when she realizes the truth about Charters. She has the greatest respect for him. Her work in that nursing-home is her life. By the way I suppose Dr. Studley is all right?"

"Absolutely. He's in the dark as to the past history of Charters, MacAdoo and Mr James Studley is one of the best and with a blameless record."

"I'm sure of it but how do you know?"

"Oh, I have a splendid chap who has been working here—under the name of Campball—for a very long time, and who has looked up his record pretty carefully. There's nobody there who isn't exactly what he or she seems to be, except Charters and his son, their two wives and MacAdoo . . . When you've told Sister Weldon, and convinced her that I'm no more insane than you are, I'll tell her all I've told you, and convince her of my sanity. When the time is ripe, I shall get Marjorie Lauderdell out of the Monastery and, as you have suggested, bring her straight here."

"It won't be easy to get her away," mused Weldon.

"No," I agreed, "it won't. But I'll get her away all right, when opportunity offers——provided your sister will help me, which, of course, she will."

"But hang it all, man," he exploded, "why not go straight to the police at once? We can . . ."

"We can't," I smiled. "As far as Marjorie's case is concerned, there is not one shred of evidence . . . and that nursing-home is a place of unblemished reputation, approved by some of the most eminent doctors in England . . . And as for myself—going to the police would be an easier matter than . . . away from them . . . I am a hunted criminal . . .

"But get your . . . and I'll stay with Ch . . .

refuge and the staunchest of friends.

Sister Weldon's position was difficult and rather terrible for, if my tale were true, her world was crumbling about her.

Her attitude increased my possible admiration for her, for she decided to suspend judgment to wait and to watch and then to act with the utmost promptitude in the event of a decision and the confirmation of the truth of my story.

Should Charles MacAdoo James the matron and Nurse Jones prove to be what I accused them of being nothing should prevent their immediate denunciation of them nor hinder her to work an other day under the direction.

Meanwhile, not believing nor in deference to her brother's admired judgment was rejecting my story she decided to watch and to wait in case if that were possible to save and to view any strange happenings, if not with suspicion at any rate in the light of what I had told her.

Again to shorten my story the archenemy the gang in I had hated 10 times [illegible] I had hated Charters [illegible] who had stolen [illegible] Rosemary was now [illegible] most against Mr [illegible] doing me [illegible]

The man of [illegible] whom I would most [illegible] ture but whom [illegible] love for Marjorie [illegible] spared, brought [illegible] dreadful punishment [illegible] kill Marjorie.

Charters his father broken hearted and fearing [illegible] arrest, fled taking with him his partners in crime his wife his daughter in law and the man Machado.

What became of them I neither know nor care.

Of the four criminals who kidnaped Rosemary three have died dreadful deaths in consequence and I am now content to leave the punishment of the [illegible] their leader in the hands of God.

Nevertheless in the very act of leaving the Monastery in urgent haste and for ever Marjorie and Sister Weldon being safely outside the walls, I spared a few minutes for an act of justice [illegible] punishment to the arch rogue of this gang and, I believe of benefit to mankind.

British Players Express Dislike for New Golf Ball

DIFFICULTY IS FOUND CONTROLLING SPHERE DURING HIGH WINDS

American Delegation Finds English Team Weakened for Cup Matches.

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, April 18—Whatever the reactions of America's golfing multitudes may be to the larger and lighter ball, it's a dud as far as the British professionals are concerned.

So says George M. Trautman, chairman of a committee that has just returned from a visit to Great Britain where an official invitation was extended the British Ryder cup team in London for the annual international matches at Scioto, Columbus, O., June 26. Trautman saw the British eligibles for the team tackle the "balloon" sphere in three tryouts tournaments. He heard plenty of comment on the ball, none of it good.

"The first thing that everyone asked me," Trautman said, "was how hard the wind blew over Scioto in June. They were much relieved to hear that the weather usualy is calm about that time in Columbus although I'll bet there are gales sweeping the course right now.

"The British professionals are having a lot of trouble handling the new ball in practice matches when the wind is blowing. I saw Abe Mitchell, one of Great Britain's longest clouters, hit three full wood shots on a 571 yard hole at St. Anne's where the wind sweeps in off the sea and still he was short of the green. They don't like the new ball."

Britain's chances in the coming Ryder cup series have been hurt by the ineligibility of Percy Alliss and Aubrey Boomer, home-breds who cannot play because of residence in other countries, and the refusal of Henry Cotton to accept the restrictions placed upon the squad. To bolster the veterans, Charles and Ernest Whitcombe, Archie Compston, Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, the Britons are counting rather heavily on youngsters. Only Charles Whitcombe, the captain, is certain of his place on the team at the present time, Trautman said, and the eight players and two alternates who sail for New York June 10 probably will not be named until after the British open, May 31, June 1 and 2.

Bobby Jones, Trautman said, has lost none of his popularity in Great Britain by commercializing his golfing ability in motion pictures.

"He is still the great idol. A huge painting of him stands in the club house at St. Anne's where he won the British open in 1926."

Van Ryn Wins Title in North and South Tourney

By International News Service.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 18—John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, and New Jersey Davis cup team player and ninth in national ranking, today held the North and South tennis championship. He defeated Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, intercollegiate champion and No. 5 in national ranking, 7-5, 6-3, 6-1, in the final yesterday.

Mrs. Van Ryn lost the women's singles title to Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, of Wilmington, Del.

SPORTS

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK

HERE'S good news for those athletically inclined individuals whose particular hobby is running. The Y. M. C. A., with the cooperation of Harding High athletic coaches is planning to revive the once popular Marion-Bucyrus Memorial day race. The event has not taken place for several years but when last run the interest was at a high point. Why it was allowed to lapse is not known.

The race, while dubbed the Memorial day race, is not strictly that. It is generally run either on Memorial day, the day preceding or the day following. This year it will probably be run on the preceding day.

Thirty-six runners make up each team, each runner covering a half mile. The distance between the two points is almost exactly 18 miles. Two teams take part in the race, one each from Marion and Bucyrus.

This event has been run off twice before this year. Bucyrus won the first race in a time of something like 2 hours, 17 minutes while Marion took the next race in approximately 2 hours, 7 minutes. (These times are not official so don't get all bothered if you happen to know they are not exactly right). The first race commenced in Marion and ended in Bucyrus and the second started in Bucyrus and ended in Marion.

There is no reason why the race should not be quite a big event each summer. When it was run before spectators lined both sides of the course for the last several hundred yards and a caravan of cars followed the runners from the start to the finish. This department hopes to see it reinaugurated and intends to do everything possible to put it across.

After spending practically all of the practice time to date working on fundamentals and theory, the Harding High football team is expected to swing into scrimmage next week if the weather will permit. Excessive heat, the coaches say, have retarded the drill considerably during the last week.

Harding coaches are hopeful of producing a better team than represented the local school last season although they are again decrying the lack of weight of the various players. The majority of the players are not as heavy as they might be although there is probably not a lot of difference between them and the average weight of the N. C. O. league

The progress of Harding in spring football practice will be watched with interest. Last year the team had a disastrous season. At the close of the year officials were not hesitant in stating that next year Harding would have a team that would give all of them a battle. Every one is hoping such predictions turn out to be more than empty words. Time will tell.

ROUGH GUY!

NICK ROZINS

Every once in a while some one is found in the wrestling game who is convinced he is just a little bit the toughest individual in the game. The latest one to get this idea, as far as is known here, is Nick (The Greek) Bozinis.

Nick will do what he can Monday night to convince the local mat fans that he really is the roughest wrestler in the grunt and groan business. He will meet "Cowboy Dude" Chick in a two hour match at the Shovel gym with two falls to win. He'll have to be rough. If he isn't he'll get killed for Chick is no congenial character once inside the squared circle.

TEMPLE TO WRESTLE RHINEHART MONDAY

Marion Grappler in Preliminary Bout of Steam Shovel Wrestling Card.

Wrestling fans who have been waiting to see Tom Temple, Marion's latest contribution to the world of grappling in action against a tough opponent will get the opportunity Monday night when Temple clambers through the ropes of the Shovel arena to meet Roy Rhinehart of Mt. Gilead. The match will be a 20 minute preliminary on the card which features Nick (The Greek) Bozinis and "Cowboy Dude" Chick.

The Temple-Rhinehart match will probably be another hair raiser with neither having much of an advantage over the other. Temple is the local idol of wrestling fans, having gained a lot of popularity in his short time of wrestling here. Rhinehart has been appearing almost regularly in preliminary matches here for several weeks. The Mt. Gilead coal heaver is rough and will give Temple all he can handle in their 20 minutes in the ring.

The main go match of the card will match Duck Chick and Nick Bozinis in a two hour limit two falls to win bout. Father Lumpkin and Ad Herman meet in the half hour semi-final.

FAVORITES LEAD IN ASSOCIATION RACE

St. Paul, Louisville Upholding Preseason Forecasts of Game's Experts.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 18—The first four skirmishes in the American association flag chase have made the world a little brighter for the baseball expert—the two top-heavy favorites, St. Paul and Louisville are deadlocked for first place and going strong.

Louisville's Colonels, champions of the circuit last year, captured three out of four from the hard hitting Minneapolis Millers. The Colonels goose egged the Millers, 6-0.

St. Paul barely squeezed through, stopping a ninth inning rally by Indianapolis to win 6 to 5.

Columbus crushed Milwaukee, 11 to 3, to gain an even break in the series yesterday.

Timely hitting, coupled with eight Toledo errors, gave Kansas City a 10 to 8 victory and an even break with Toledo.

COMPARES EVENTS OF TWO TITLE BOUTS IN STATE OF OHIO

12 Years Between Dempsey-Willard and Schmeling-Stribling Fights.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 18—While Willie Stribling and Max Schmeling crawl between the ropes in Cleveland's mammoth municipal stadium the night of July 3, to settle the world's heavyweight boxing championship under perhaps the most ideal conditions a fight has ever been staged many present will turn in retrospect to Ohio's other heavyweight fight.

They will remember that eventful afternoon just 12 years before, lacking one day, when the comparatively unknown Jack Dempsey blasted the crown from the brow of Jess Willard in a few short rounds in that blistering pine bowl on the shores of Maumee bay at Toledo.

What a strange contrast Ohio's two heavyweight championship fights will present.

At Toledo, July 4, 1919—Willard and Dempsey surrounded by sweltering fans in a bowl half filled. The arena, constructed of rough pine boards, almost over night, by the late Tex Rickard, at a cost of approximately $75,000; the barbed wire partitions between different priced seats; the crowd, only 40,000; the long semi-circular rows upon rows of empty plank seats; uncertain traffic accommodations; the terrific heat; and last but not least the pestiferous sand flys and insects that infest the lake regions.

At Cleveland, July 3, 1931—Stribling and Schmeling in a boxing contest that smacks of international flavor. The arena, one of the finest in the country, constructed at a cost of $2,500,000; the glaring kleig lights, shining down on semi-nude athletes; seating capacity for 125,000 persons; the long line of taxis, street cars and costly automobiles; the systematic handling of the crowd, and the crowd, which will have arrived by train, boat, plane and auto.

Ohio's first heavyweight championship fight drew 40,000 fans and total gate receipts of $452,522. Present estimates are that more than three times that will see the Stribling-Schmeling affair and likewise gate receipts are expected to triple, placing the fight in the select class of million dollar attractions.

RAJAH BANGS HOMER TO AID CUBS WIN, 5-4

Only One Game Played in Major League; Cards-Reds Rained Out.

By The Associated Press

For the fans who like their double headers in May and June, there was a catch in yesterday's program that saw the Chicago Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5 to 4, in the only big league contest.

Only two games were scheduled yesterday as the entire American league and half the National took a day off before the first big week end. The St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds were forced to postpone their clash at Cincinnati on account of wet grounds.

Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs put his team into undisputed possession of third place in the National league after young Charley Wood's pitching had almost stopped the Chicago sluggers. After shutting out the Cubs with two hits in five innings and fanning five, Woods weakened in the sixth and gave two runs. Then with two on base in the seventh, the Rajah clouted his second home run of the season. This proved to be the winning tally.

Disturbed Fans Forget Boos As Cub Team Wins

BY PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, April 18—There are exactly 150 games left for howling occasions by disturbed fans but to date Rogers Hornsby is making good in a big way as player-manager of William Wrigley's Cubs.

Probably no change of managers ever precipitated as much jeering as when the Rajah succeeded Joe McCarthy as pilot of the Cubs toward the end of the 1930 campaign; probably no baseball manager ever won the admiration of the fickle fans as quickly.

In the first four games of the season under the Rajah's leadership, the Cubs not only won three games for a flying start in the pennant race but they answered the speculation that they wouldn't draw the crowds any more because of McCarthy's dismissal by attracting approximately 105,000 customers or an average of about 26,000 a game.

The Rajah himself appears to have definitely settled one of the big questions in the pennant chances of his Cubs. And that question is his ability to come back as a player. Although he cannot be expected to be fast because of his age, near 36 years, he is in good physical condition. He is as dangerous as ever as a hitter and he fields much better than he did in 1929 and 1930. In the Pirate series, he batted better than .300, although he is a notoriously weak spring hitter, scored five runs, drove in six and won two of the battles by one run by smashing out home runs. Defensively, he handled 28 chances with but one error on a viciously hit grounder ball, surprised the fans by running back on the grass and getting pop flies and was a pivotal point in three lightning double plays.

BUCKEYE BASEBALL TEAMS OPEN BATTLE FOR DIAMOND TITLE

Wesleyan Expected To Be in Fight To Displace Last Year's Champs.

After a series of warm-up engagements to determine strength and weakness, the Buckeye conference baseball teams swing into actual warfare this week-end with half a dozen games appearing upon the schedule.

Early season encounters with teams of good strength indicate that the Buckeye baseballers will again be playing a high calibre of the diamond game this season.

Competition with members of the Western conference saw Miami split a two-game series with Indiana and down Michigan while Ohio Wesleyan lost two close decisions to the Ohio State nine. The Big Ten marked up one when the Indiana club defeated DePauw, in the opening engagement for both teams by a 24 to 5 score.

DePauw meets Indiana again while Wabash is slated for a two-game series with the Hoosiers in addition to a battle with Purdue.

Reports from all Buckeye camps have it that there is a crying need for good pitchers while the hitting strength of all clubs is seemingly the outstanding quality.

Cincinnati and Miami, the clubs which have dominated Buckeye baseball for the past three years, are expecting plenty of competition from the Ohio and Ohio Wesleyan quarters.

KANSAS RELAPS TODAY

By The Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kas., April 18—New outdoor track and field records were the objectives of more than 700 athletes from 63 universities and colleges in the ninth annual Kansas relays here today.

Outstanding performers of the middlewest were among those seeking new marks in the 12 relay races and nine special events. Managers of the carnival forecast the fastest meet in its history.

"I Find Many Uses for Your Want-Ads"

SAYS THIS HOUSEWIFE

Such a time-saver! And results follow so QUICKLY! They're my very first thought whenever there's a WANT to be satisfied.. a happy thought, too. For years, of course, I used Star Want Ads to hire domestic help. And recently they've been helping me in other ways, too.

"When we moved last fall, our delightful bungalow was located through these Want Ads. We sublet our old apartment in the same way. And last week they helped us again! You'd know what I mean if you saw it on our driveway...the cutest, prettiest sedan you ever laid eyes on, almost new. And we found it in the Marion Star Want Ads.

GRAIN PRICES TEND UPWARD

French Import Allowance Boost Has Bullish Effect on U. S. Market.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 18—Announcement that France had raised the quota of foreign wheat that millers would be permitted to use had an immediate bullish effect on grain prices today. Canadian reports of continued dust storms tended also to stimulate buying. Wheat started unchanged to 1¼ higher, and afterward held near to the initial figues. Corn started at a shade decline to ¼ advance and subsequently sagged.

An increase to 20 per cent in the amount of imported wheat allowed for mixture with native wheat in France, was promptly interpreted as foreshadowing enlarged demand for shipments from North America. The increase of the import quota was five per cent, and was generally taken here to mean that French home-grown supplies has been worked down to a point where necessity forced foreign buying. Counting further as a price strengthening influence, was a cable from a British trade authority that European wheat seeding had been delayed by the cold spring, that stocks on hand were generally small, and that consuming countries were expected to purchase heavily during the next two months.

Overnight purchases of more than 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for trans-Atlantic shipment were announced. Some advices from Canada said dust storms prevailing were the most severe yet this season, and that little or no moisture relief was predicted. Hessian fly and cutworm reports continued in northern Kansas and southern Nebraska. Enlarged receipts of corn made feed grains relatively weak.

Provisions were easy, responsive to downturns in hog values.

"WOMAN HUNGRY" TO PLAY OHIO

Lila Lee, Sidney Blackmer, Fred Kohler and Raymond Hatton are the principals in "Woman Hungry" showing at the Ohio Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

LILA LEE

The company worked between the highest and lowest points in America in filming the picture. Many of the locations were taken against the background of Mount Whitney, the highest peak in the United States. From the top of Mount Whitney, a spectator may look across the next range and into Death Valley, some 300 feet below sea level. In this view—within a range of 50 miles, there is a difference in altitude of almost 15,000 feet.

It took 30 trucks to transport to location all of the camera and Vitaphone equipment needed to film the outdoor scenes at a location of 230 miles from Hollywood. The picture is all-technicolor.

Will Rogers visited the set while they were filming "Woman Hungry" and after the action had started, Clarence Badger, the director, had to stop it and re-take the scene because all of the actors were chewing gum which Rogers had passed out.

WILL ROGERS AT PALACE

The Palace is bringing the famous Mark Twain story, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," to the screen Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, starring the gum-chewing, rope-throwing Will Rogers.

WILL ROGERS

"A Connecticut Yankee" was one of the best of the silent pictures, and if memory serves, Henry or Harry Martin played the Yankee. Modern touches have been added, but from reviews, the picture is all the more riotously comic.

William Farnum plays "King Arthur," seductive Myrna Loy is the wicked "Queen Morgan LeFay," Maureen O'Sullivan is "Princess Alisande," Brandon Hurst is "Merlin," Frank Alberston is "Clarence," and Mitchell Harris is "Sagramor."

The cast numbers 5,000 players in roles of knights and ladies of the court by the hundreds, servants, herald, pages and hundreds of villagers. David Butler, the director, played the street sweeper in Janet's Gaynor's "Seventh Heaven."

"AFRICA SPEAKS" RETURNS

"Africa Speaks" is returning to Marion Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to play at the Princess. This is one of the best of the travel pictures, filmed in the unexplored regions of equatorial Africa.

Strange pygmies and giants, wild animals, and primitive living are shown as they really are, not as Hollywood "travel pictures" are filmed.

First Churches Underground

By The Schaffner-Queen Co.

The first Christian church was founded underground—in the Roman catacombs. This subterranean marvel had been secretly excavated by the early Christians for burial purposes.

Because graves were protected and highly respected by the Romans, the catacombs became a safe haven of refuge for the persecuted Christians and a convenient place in which to hold their meetings.

Modern times therefore mean enlightenment in more than one sense of the word, as applied to religious and burial rites. Funeral ceremonies are now conducted in broad daylight, with a security that is taken for granted.

This same atmosphere of enlightenment and broadmindedness pervades the business practices of a reliable funeral director. He is frank and "above board" in all his dealings. All his prices are plainly marked, for the complete funeral, with no unexpected, confusing or unjustifiable list of "extras."

This is the 25th of a series of editorial advertisements appearing in this paper each Saturday.

LAY PLANS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

T. E. Andrews To Call Meeting of Committee Next Week.

Formulation of Marion Memorial day plans will get under way probably next week when T E Andrews of East Fairground street calls a meeting of the general committee in charge of plans at the American Legion dugout

Andrews is chairman of the committee, holding his office from last year At the meeting, the committee will organize and name committees to arrange for the local observance of Memorial day.

The general committee is composed of five members each from the G A R, Spanish war veterans and World war veterans

A speaker for the principal address of the day has already been secured by a committee named last year Major General D E Nolan, of Fort Hayes, Columbus, commanding general of the Fifth Corps area comprising Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia, will deliver the Memorial day address.

Major General Nolan, an outstanding World war veteran and Legion man, was obtained as speaker by the speakers committee made up of J W Llwellyn C. C Caldwell and Lee Howison

Unless the customary Memorial day procedure is changed radically, the program for the day will include a parade to Marion cemetery where the address will be given The address probably will follow the decoration of graves of veterans with baskets of flowers placed by children

Her score of 176 points out of a possible 200, is the highest made by any student in the county, and reports from four adjoining counties show that her grade has not been equaled Authorities at Central Junior High school in which she is a pupil, believe that she may hold a record in this section of the state.

Close Second

The questions concerned English, arithmetic, history and science, and the students were given two hours in which to write the answers.

The upper fourth of the students are presented certificates of merit from the state department of education. There were 78 students in the upper fourth at Central, seven at Silver and nine at Greenwood. The Vernon results have not been completely checked.

The 78 on the Central roll were awarded certificates from the state department Friday morning in a special assembly. J C Emmons, principal at the Silver Street building will award certificates in an assembly next Friday

'Missing Man' Visits Here After 31-Year Absence

Missing from his relatives for 31 years, Charles Munyon, 44, recently came to Marion to walk back into the lives of kinsfolk who had believed him dead.

He is now at the home of Mrs. Frank M. Hood, a sister, at 630 Lee street, after visiting two brothers at Pittsburgh.

Thirty-one years ago a family of eight children at Portsmouth, of which Charles was the youngest, broke up when the father, A. J. Munyon, died. Charles was then 13 Gradually the family drifted apart and Charles disappeared completely

Years passed by neither Mrs. Hood nor her brothers and sisters heard any word from him. Two sisters and a brother died. As years continued to slip by without a letter or word from Charles, his relatives concluded he had died.

Meantime, the spirit of the wanderlust called Charles. He joined a circus troupe, later going to Europe twice. He brought many wild animals to this country for circuses.

He has been through Marion and Pittsburgh, but never saw any of his relatives or informed them where he was located. Now married, he lives at Saginaw, Mich.

In addition to his sister, Mrs Hood, Charles has three brothers, Mike and Alva of Pittsburgh, and John of Portsmouth, living.

During Phillips H. Lord's "Uncle Abe and David" programs with Arthur Allen as his partner, an old lady up in New England knits away industriously as she sits by the loudspeaker. The results of her labors are now in the hands of "Uncle Abe." They consist of four hand-made sweaters in different hues, red, black, blue and gray Ever an enthusiastic Lord fan, this old grandmother has sent Lord the sweaters to show her appreciation of his sketches. She judged his size from a newspaper photo and strangely enough they fit very well.

A nautical strain in Phillips H. Lord's character has broken over the city barriers of New York and has manifested itself in a new boat which the creator of "Uncle Abe and David" with Arthur Allen, has just acquired.

This boat Lord keeps anchored near his home on Long Island From these shores he puts out each day and spends several hours hard at work on his radio scripts, a forthcoming book, and many newspaper articles. He finds the silence of the waters conducive to intensive production.

Help for Trouble

A SERMONETTE
BY REV. KARL W. PATOW.
Pastor Prospect Street M. E. Church.

Psalm 37, 5. "Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and many are still seeking and hoping for help and relief. The

IN recent times many people have been in great want and distress, saints of God have realized that they are never left without a helper. The Lord is to them a real and a true friend. They rejoice in times when all is well. They trust Him when in distress. They commit to Him their life with all its perplexing problems, they trust Him for the solution and He helps them work them out in the way that is for their good and to His glory.

May we learn from God's saints, and commit our way unto the Lord, to trust Him in all of life's problems and let Him work them out for us and with us, and we too will find that He will do for us what is to our good and to His glory.

Remember, however, that to commit a thing is not to ignore it or to neglect it, but to commit a thing to someone is a definite transaction. If I commit my money to a banker there is a definite transaction by which I turn it over to him, and leave it in his care.

Likewise, to commit my way or my life, or my problem to the Lord means that I take it to God, turn it over to Him, and leave it with Him. If my watch is broken I may take it to the watchmaker, and tell him about the trouble, but if I expect Him to help me and fix the watch, I must commit it to him; that is, I must turn it over to him to do with it what the condition demands.

And how can we expect God to help us unless we turn over to Him our ways, our life, our problems, and leave them with him, and trust Him to do with them what the condition demands. We can only say that multitudes of his saints have done that very thing—to their joy and to His glory. Do thou likewise. Amen.

Christian Scientists Hear Church Lecturer

Peter V. Ross of San Francisco Talks Before Marion Members on Principles of Faith; Speaker Is Member of Board of Lecturers.

The basis of the Christian Science religion was expounded by Rev. Peter V. Ross, C. S. B., of San Francisco, member of the board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, in a lecture, "An Outline of Christian Science," given last night at First church here.

The lecture was of unusual interest to Christian Scientists, and follows in part:

"More and more in these days are we transferring all things to the mental realm. Christian Science puts disease there, along with evil, and insists that disease, instead of being a physical condition, instead of being a stubborn reality, is a belief or an illusion of the human mind, which the truth will cure.

"What is the truth that will cure any person of his suffering? Simply this: God has made man perfect and maintains him in perfection; and whenever any individual, whatever his suffering may be, begins to grasp the fact that God has fashioned him in perfection, he will necessarily begin to drop his belief of distress and lay hold of strength and health.

Perfection of Man

"It is inconceivable that God should have made anything imperfect. Flaws in the universe would bring the universe to an end. And the perfect man under consideration is not away off in the clouds. He is not a man yet to be born or come into existence. The perfect man is here and now, and you are that man.

"Not your outward physical self. Confessedly he is imperfect enough. The perfect man is your spiritual self, the man God has made you. Your supposed physical self is really not a man, is really not you. It is the human mind's mistaken sense of you.

"We used to think of God, at least most of us did, as a man magnified, a sort of king occupying a throne beyond the clouds. But in the light of Christian Science we see that God is divine mind. And when we think of God as mind we immediately think of Him as life also, because mind and life are essentially the same. And associated with mind and life is love. These three are inextricably identified with one another, and they are, as you know, the Christian Science names for God.

"Christian Science has come to this age through Mary Baker Eddy. She was a New England woman, refined and intensely religious. When in a critical condition, the result of an accident, she turned to her Bible for consolation. While reading one of the Gospel accounts of healing performed by Jesus she felt a sense of peace and strength steal over her. She arose, dressed, and presented herself to anxious friends relieved of her distress.

As she came into a fuller understanding of this science, she set forth its principles in her remarkable book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

"Her fundamental proposition that God is mind or spirit, and therefore that the earth with its fullness is mental and spiritual, has the support of both reason and revelation.

"Mind finds expression in thoughts and ideas, not in solid physical projects. Only when we rely upon the physical senses of touch and sight do things seem hard and stationary and man a physical figure so many feet in height and so many pounds in weight.

"This blurred, heavy sense of things constitutes matter. Matter, therefore, is not the substantial reality it appears. It is a mistaken concept of things and this mistaken concept of things, as heavy and localized disappears as physical sense yields to spiritual sense or true vision.

"You get a hint of this lightness and buoyancy in your dreams, for then you occasionally find yourself soaring through the air like a bird.

"Many are the illusions that throng human experience. But the one that makes you the most trouble is the illusion that you are incased in a physical body and hence that the hurt or destruction of this body means your hurt or destruction. The fact is, you are spiritual. You cannot be compressed within a material habitation. Spiritual man is free and unconfined.

"There is not a person in the audience who has not already had several different bodies and every one of you is due to have nobody knows how many more.

Continuity of Life

"All this should help you to understand what takes place when death comes and your present sense of body is abruptly abandoned. Evidently you still remain aware of a body, for as Mrs. Eddy says in that wonderful way she has of saying things, 'Mortals waken from the dream of death with bodies unseen by those who think that they bury the body.' Why unseen? Because of unbelief and dullness of vision.

"But when you go through the experience of death you will still find yourself thinking and living, because consciousness, that consciousness God gives you, continues and persists on and on beyond the grave.

"The greater the man, if greatness be measured as it should be by spirituality, the more constant his practice to commune with divine mind. This was exemplified in the life of Christ Jesus. The gospels often refer to his habit of prayer.

"What did Jesus accomplish in this last scene of his earthly career? He permitted his enemies to do their utmost to destroy him, apparently they had destroyed him, then he came back alive the selfsame man. He proved that individual life cannot be destroyed. You will see that your life cannot be destroyed nor brought to an end as you come to realize that you are an individual consciousness, not a physical body, a consciousness wherein limitless Mind and imperishable Life find expression making you God's witness. He proved that individual life is indestructable and continuous; he stepped forth into the freedom and the power of an endless life, a state to which every one of us may rightly aspire.

REVEALS INDUSTRIAL FIRMS' 1930 PROFITS

U. S. Industry Earns Money Despite Current Depression and Unemployment.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., April 18 — Despite 1930's unemployment, depression and failures, the country's leading industrial corporations made better than six per cent profit on their capital investment, Ernst & Ernst, nationwide firm of accountants, revealed today.

The accountants showed that compared to depressions of previous decades, some of 1930's performances were astonishingly successful.

The analysis covered 407 representative corporations in 20 widely diversified branches of industry. It showed their 1930 average profits on capital investment were 6.49 per cent as compared with 1.39 per cent in the depression year of 1921.

On approximately the same basis of comparison these corporations had profits of 11.35 per cent in the bonanza year of 1929.

Additional figures from 130 of these corporations showed inventories which were 41 per cent of net plant investment in 1921, were held down to 33 per cent in 1930; sales were 4.14 times inventories in 1921, as compared to 5.21 times in 1930; net profits on sales were less than half of one per cent in 1921 compared to 5.7 per cent in 1930.

Ernst & Ernst pointed out that the 5.7 per cent profits on sales in the "bad year of 1930" were better than the 5.02 per cent rate of profit in the so-called "good year of 1920."

Commenting on the 1930 status of inventories, sales and profits, Ernst & Ernst said "all of these are favorable factors and serve to suggest that management of the larger companies has improved materially in the past 10 years. The study also raises doubts as to whether plants of the larger corporations are as much over-expanded as is generally assumed."

plete the concrete work alone. Among the first steps will be to take 1,000 workers to Nevada's wastelands to build a railroad to carry supplies to the dam site. Boulder City is springing up almost overnight, with 4,000 workers and their families locating there.

Six states will benefit from the construction of the dam. President Hoover issued a proclamation on June 25, 1929, making effective the Boulder Canyon project.

After more than eight years of planning and agitation, the major offensive against the turbulent Colorado river has been started, the Associated Press reports.

Boulder City headquarters will rise from a wilderness of sagebrush. A sum of $525,000 has been provided for laying out this model city and starting the construction of a highway to the dam site.

Tunnels to Divert Flow

One of the striking engineering feats facing the contractors is diversion of the flow of the great stream from its bed between the huge cliffs where the dam is to be built.

To accomplish the diversion it will be necessary to drive four tunnels 50 feet in diameter through the solid rock on both sides of the gorge—two tunnels on each side. These tunnels will be lined with concrete and they will carry the water from the regular course of the river while the dam itself is under construction.

The government, in accepting the bid of the Six Companies, Inc. on March 11, specified that actual work shall start within 30 days, and that the whole project shall be completed in six years.

It will take four years to complete the concrete work alone. By September, 1936, the electrical plant at the dam will be supplying current to the City of Los Angeles and the Southern California Edison Co. under contract.

In about a year another government contract will be let for construction of the All-American canal which will deliver water to southern California. This project will cost approximately $38,500,000.

To Repay Cost in 34 Years

The cost of the entire flood control, water supply and power program in the Colorado will approximate $165,000,000. The sale of power and delivery of water for irrigation purposes is to repay the government that sum in 34 years.

Boulder City will be completed within a year. The water and power systems will be finished by June, and after that the building will go ahead.

Frank Crowe, of Boise, Idaho, for many years an engineer for the United States reclamation service, will act as general superintendent in charge of the entire construction. He was employed as general manager for the Six Companies, Inc., a group which pooled its resources and equipment because the job was considered too big for a single concern.

ORDER ISSUED IN GALION LITIGATION

Federal Judge Grants Motion Realigning Bank Case Defendants.

The equity call calendar for that term has been prepared and does not list the cashier's suit. The next equity term of court is in December.

Sues for Stockholders

The cashier's suit as filed in Crawford county courts was brought, according to her petition, against the directors on behalf of herself and other stockholders. Miss Volk said she owns 16 shares in the defunct bank.

Evensen's motion claims that under national banking laws the receiver is given authority to bring any action necesary in behalf of the stockholders and charged that the cashier's suit was an "unwarranted interference" with his work.

Except for Bachelder, defendants named by Miss Volk were members of the bank's finance committee which she charges sanctioned Casey's stock market speculations, resulting in a loss of more than $225,000 to the bank.

their troubles on the fact that they are no longer allowed to burn a white dog every year, according to ancient custom. The white dog, burned alive, purified their souls and carried away their diseases, a sort of canine scapegoat. But the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, another white invention, made them stop that. The last white dog was burned alive 20 years ago in a stove in the Onondaga "Ong House," which is the reservation's legislative hall and executive mansion. Times have been bad, health poor, with no more white dog burnings.

This gigantic nation of 123,000,000 complains of its depression. It never burned a white dog officially but it did burn a good many billions of dollars in a stupid war that makes all Indian cruelty seem childs play.

The whites should be ashamed to complain, gigantically prosperous with too much of everything, coal, oil, cotton, wheat, money, everything but courage.

Letters and telegrams indorsing the movement and expressing their willingness to cooperate in a movement to promote Marion's interests were received from several railroad officials by Dr. Sawyer. Those read last night included telegrams from J. M. Condon of Jersey City, assistant vice president in charge of operations of the Erie; Carl Howe, vice president of the Erie at Chicago; and W. W. Houston, division superintendent of the C. & O. at Columbus. Letters read were from C. E. Denney of New York, president of the Erie; R. E. Woodruff, vice president of the Erie; P. F. Nichols, division engineer on the Kent division of the Erie; and C. F. Lingenfelter, superintendent of the Toledo division of the Pennsylvania; C. Bucholtz, general manager of the western district of the Erie with headquarters at Youngstown.

Cooperation in any movement to better the city generally was pledged by Geo. H. Van Fleet, publisher of The Star, in his talk on Marion and the newspaper.

Contrary to common belief, Marion industrialists welcome new industries in Marion and have done more than their share to bring new industries here. C. B. King, vice president of the Marion Steam Shovel Co., declared in his talk on the city and industry. Marion has ideal transportation facilities, is ideally situated, and has good living and social conditions to help attract new industries, Mr. King said.

W. E. Bartholomew, manager of the Susquehanna Silk Mills. He predicted that industry in general will pick up with business and industry throughout the country.

At the close of the meeting, Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, chairman of the group of 32 citizens sponsoring the boost Marion movement, reported that 780 persons have attended the four meetings held to date. At least two more similar meetings are scheduled.

3 YOUTHS DROWN AS BOAT CAPSIZES

Grappling Party Recovers Victims' Bodies Near Dam in Ohio River.

By Brush-Moore Leased Wire.

STEUBENVILLE, April 18—The bodies of three youths, drowned in a back channel of the Ohio river at Costonia, were recovered Friday night near the dike which capsized their boat and threw them into a foaming whirlpool. The victims are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Gekis, Steubenville. They are Theodore, 16, George, 14, and Samuel, 11.

The two older boys had been living on Brown's island which is opposite Costonia, lying in the Ohio river between Steubenville and Toronto. They had been plowing a field for their father, a millworker, who visited them nightly and stayed with them over week ends. On Thursday night he took the youngest boy to the island and the boy insisted on staying instead of returning to school.

Gekis left work early yesterday afternoon with groceries for the boys. He came to the river crossing to find a score of men grappling for the bodies. The boys, he said, had been helping fight grass fires, rowing out on to the Ohio and West Virginia shores to help river bank farmers and squatters in beating down the blaze. He thinks they were on a similar mission yesterday when their boat was caught in the swift current and struck the dike.

"The Unparalleled Act."

Another season, or perhaps two, may see the return to all circus programs of a feature which had great appeal to circusgoers forty or more years ago; a feature which was considered by many the "big act" of the bills of old-time shows.

Last week's Billboard carried a first-page announcement that two circuses will bring back this season the famous leaping act of years ago, word having reached that amusement weekly from the winter quarters of the Dutton show in Sarasota, Florida, and Downie Bros.' circus in Macon, Georgia, that each will put on a "grand tournament of leapers,' which will be presented by the entire male personnel of the acrobatic departments of each show.

The Billboard states that the long-neglected feature is to be produced only after a thorough delving into old circus records and pictures in an efofrt to present it in "its old-time style and splendor" and that the acrobats have been in training all winter with a view to accomplishing the feats of from three to five decades ago. Both shows claim that they are putting on the act in answer to popular demand for its return, and the Dutton people, in presenting the feature, will use the wording of the Cooper & Bailey program of 1888, calling it "The grand tournament of batouette leaping—over horses, elephants and many elevated objects."

The act, at its best, was a progressive thrill. Three or four elephants, possibly as many camels or dromedaries, and as many horses would be brought into the circus tent and placed side by side, heads alternating. Down a steep incline from inside the dressing tent the performers would run, jump upon a springboard and be bounced over the assembled animals, turning a somersault at the height of their flight, and land on a thick mattress. More horses would be brought in until there finally would be as many as twenty animals in the row. True, their heads rather than their bodies constituted the obstacle over which the acrobats leaped, but it represented real distance at that, and its height toward the end of the act was measurably augmented by the less expert performers by making first a double and then a triple pyramid on the backs of the elephants. Finally the band would cease to play and the ringmaster would make the announcement that So-and-So would perform the "unparalleled act, presented under this tent only, of turning a double somersault while leaping over twenty animals and a pyramid of six men." The drums would sound. So-and-So would dash down the incline, turn the double somersault while sailing gracefully through the air and land on the great mattress next the ringside. And the air would ring with the plaudits of the audience.

It really was a mighty fine and entertaining act, but alas for the veracity of the announcer, each show on the road seemed to have been able to locate a man capable of getting on the "unparalleled act."

A New Foreign Policy.

The new Nicaraguan policy of the United States will not need to go begging for favor among the American people. No more pleasing statement concerning foreign policy could be published than that which says American marines will not land or be maintained in Nicaragua for the general protection of American property unless American lives also are in danger. One of the most unpopular policies of the Coolidge administration has been discarded. In 1927, President Coolidge said:

"The person and property of a citizen are a part of the general domain of the nation, even when abroad. * * * There is a distinct and binding obligation on the part of self-respecting governments to afford protection to the persons and property of their citizens, wherever they may be. * * * These rights go with the citizen. Wherever he goes, these duties of our government must follow him."

This policy never was popular with the masses of the people; it has constituted an inflamed area of opinion for four years. People have regarded the state department's policy as a cold-blooded one in which lives of American marines were held cheaper than the investments of business concerns eager to carry on trade in an unsettled nation which they dared enter only as the bosom companion of Uncle Sam. Private industry took the reward and United States marines paid with their lives. Marines have been present in Nicaragua since 1912, with the exception of a short period in 1925-26. Since the election of 1926, the force has been increased or decreased according to conditions.

The new policy means also that this nation's persistent attempts to stabilize constitutional government in Nicaragua are virtually at an end. Secretary Stimson's promise of Central American development by mutual endeavor and President Hoover's hope that major differences between the republics of the Americas might be settled by "the orderly processes of conciliation" sound hollow in the echo of a policy committing America to a hands-off posture where Nicaragua is concerned.

General opinion will give the administration credit for what it firmly believes is an advance step in foreign policy. Certain business interests, particularly those operating in unsettled countries where Uncle Sam's prestige must serve as a card of introduction and a guarantee of safety, will criticize the new policy freely, but the deed is done now. The marines finally are coming out of Nicaragua, and America is glad of it, but even while there may be this satisfaction in the Nicaraguan case, there will be many who will be inclined to prefer the Coolidge policy, as a rule, to the Hoover.

Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart insists that he will offer a bill to check the "freedom" of any men stationed in Panama, charging that their behavior is "a disgrace to the uniform they wear." In one respect the senator is like many other Americans back from Panama. The further he gets away from the Panaman saloons the madder he seems to become.

The United States will delay recognition of the new Spanish republic until her European neighbors have extended recognition, which is not only the courteous and sensible course, but also the diplomatic as well.

President Hoover plans to spend his summer vacation in Washington and make week-end fishing trips. If the President establishes that plan as the fashion, it will have the effect of making our annual two weeks off on pay enjoying the delights of home life somewhat less noticeable.

A model rocket plane reached an altitude of 5,000 feet, a day or two ago at Osnabruck, Germany, and landed without damage. While it is true that a small model plane and one sufficiently large to carry a man are two entirely different things, the possibilities of the rocket plane should not be judged hastily. It may be recalled that there was a lot of skepticism regarding flight in any sort of heavier-than-air machine when Professor Langley was prosecuting his experimentations.

Customs agents seized 218 bottles of assorted liquors, valued at $1,000 at current prices, which they found hidden in the quarters of the crew of the White Star liner, Majestic, when that vessel docked in New York this week. Two hundred and eighteen bottles valued at $1,000! Can it be that the gentlemanly bootleggers are slashing prices?

The Michigan house of representatives has voted a bill which provides for the payment of a maximum pension of $30 a month to indigent persons seventy years of age or over, anticipating that the $3,500,000 to meet the provision in case the bill becomes a law may be raised by a three per cent. levy on all crude mineral products extracted in Michigan. All such legislation may prove a fine thing for the beneficiaries, but it's liable to give a boost, sooner or later, to the general cost of living.

A Well-Mannered Englishman.

America has learned from many experiences not to except too much from its distinguished English visitors, particularly those who make their living with the pen. With few exceptions, visiting Englishmen have felt free to castigate American people, American customs, buildings and everything that came to their attention, and by way of adding insult to injury, have not always waited until they returned home to vent their pent-up spleen. America's childish eagerness to please its parent nation, an eagerness that has been manifested all too frequently by aping English customs, has made the "hurt" that results from such criticism a humiliating one.

The departure from the practice of laying the lash on America advocated by John Galsworthy, eminent English author, visiting here now, is pleasing. He believes that a visitor who becomes caustic at the expense of the nation he is touring is violating good manners and committing a breach of hospitality. More important, he practices what he preaches.

It must be a pleasure for Mr. Galsworthy's hosts to know that he does not expect to embarrass them by his rudeness. Sad to say, a well-mannered Englishman in the United States has become a real novelty, so many of them suffer from a consciousness of the superiority which America foolishly attributes to them.

Editorial Opinion.

THE AX, GOVERNOR.

Governor White has before him the Ackerman indeterminate sentence bill which would take from the courts the power to mete out punishment commensurate to the crime and on the basis of the facts adduced.

The bill would restore a system that was proved to be a failure in an eight-year experiment, 1913 to 1921. The law was repealed because it created a condition so unsatisfactory that the entire machinery of justice in Ohio was threatened.

In short, the Ackerman bill would deprive a judge of all discretion concerning the length of sentence in criminal cases. It would make it impossible for a judge to set a minimum term and make of the bench little more than a figurehead.

There are two major evils involved: Such a law would render impotent the one agency truly capable of deciding the amount of punishment deserved; it would add fuel to the smouldering fires of discontent that make of Ohio's penal institutions veritable volcanoes.

Herd 4,500 men into a small enclosure built for less than half that number, rob them of a definite hope for release and place their destinies in the hands of a tiny group—the parole board—and a situation is created that has horrible potentialities—not to mention the utter lack of justice involved.

This same bill would increase the parole board from two to four and raise their salaries. A larger board is desirable and possibly these men deserve more pay, but the proposition is riding in bad company. The bill deserves the ax, governor.—Columbus Dispatch.

VITAL STATISTICS ON MONARCHY.

The number of European monarchs shaken from their thrones since the beginning of the World war has been placed at nine. The case of Ferdinand of Bulgaria is doubtful, since he made way for his son, but the monarchy survived. This list of nine casualties might be made a round dozen by recalling three bona fide rulers of prearmistice days, the kings of Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg within the framework of the German empire.

That empire, it may be remembered, was a federal state composed of twenty-five sovereignties. These included four kingdoms—Prussia in addition to those mentioned—six grand duchies, five duchies and seven principalities, with three free cities. In Germany alone there have disappeared more sovereign houses, in the sense of the Almanach de Gotha, than in all the rest of the world.

The kingship record since the war is not altogether one-sided. Against a dozen sovereignties that have disappeared, there are a half dozen new ones, most of them outside of Europe. Four of the new kings are successors to the holdings of the Turkish empire—the kings of Egypt, Iraq, Hedjaz and Nejd, and Transjordania. In Europe the new sovereignties are Albania and the Vatican State. —New York Times.

Pneumonia Attacks.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Of all the acute infectious diseases, pneumonia has always been most feared. It is more common and more fatal than any other infectious disease. It is as wide-spread in its devastating career as tuberculosis.

Pneumonia differs from other infectious diseases in that one attack does not give immunity to a second attack. In fact, it seems to work the other way. Recurrence is more common in pneumonia than in any other acute disease.

The ailment is found in all climates, in tropical as well as cold countries. Its severity varies in different countries. Pneumonia is more virulent in the United States than it is in England, for instance. This is believed by some authorities to be due in part, at least, to our custom of working in dry and overheated rooms.

The disease is caued by a germ called the "pneumococcus." There are four different types of this germ. They differ in their mode of attack and in the severity of the disease.

The germ enters the body through the nose or mouth. This germ is found in the atmosphere and in much of the dust with which we come in contact.

For some reason, not yet clearly understood, not all persons are stricken with pneumonia. The disease manifests itself when the body has become weakened and rendered susceptible to infection.

Good health is our only assurance of resistance to this disease. Weakening diseases lower the body resistance and render it liable to pneumonia. That is why this complication is particularly common after an attack of influenza. The form of pneumonia that follows a siege of influenza is often very dangerous.

Chronic alcoholics are particularly prone to this disease. Alcohol has special powers in lessening the body resistance to the infection. In such cases convalescence is often a difficult and stormy one.

The disease may follow exposure to cold, injury, undernourishment, fatigue, overexertion or local irritation. It is often a complication of measles, whooping cough, typhoid fever and other diseases.

It should be remembered that sturdy, healthy individuals, who abuse their good health, may be stricken by pneumonia. Anything that tends to reduce the strength of the body increases the liability to pneumonia.

Loss of sleep, overwork, worry, poor food, lack of fresh air, alcohol and exposure to cold should be avoided. This is particularly important for the very young and the aged.

Cosmic Dimensions.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

One of the revolutionary features of modern astronomy is the enormous extension, magnification of the scale of the universe. During very recent years the increase in the size of cosmic dimensions and stellar velocities has been spectacular in the extreme. By means of the Period luminosity law, the refinements in photography and the increased accuracy in the machinery and use of the spectroscope, new wonders hitherto unsuspected, have been revealed.

If Shapley and his school are to be credited, the size of the universe has been magnified ten times. The distance from us of the most distant spiral nebulae is so great that some astronomers think these vast agglomeration of matter are near the other verge of a finite, but unbounded, universe. According to the very latest discoveries, these exceedingly remote objects are moving at a rate of speed far beyond all reasonable explanation. On February 25, just past, the Carnegie institution announced the discovery of a spiral nebula with the enormous and breath-taking speed of 11,000 miles per second. This nebula is estimated to be 120,000,000 light-years away from the earth. This would be about seven hundred and twenty quintrillion miles, or seventy-two followed by nineteen ciphers. This discovery was made by Dr. Milton L. Humason at Mount Wilson, California, using a special short-focus lens with the 100-inch telescope to photograph the spectrum of the nebula. These vast bodies rushing away from the earth at these great velocities lends to the theory of Le Maitre that the universe is undergoing a steady expansion and enlargement.

There is, however, considerable evidence on the other side tending to show that all these new distances constitute a very considerable exaggeration of the actual dimensions. It seems highly probable that inter-stellar space absorbs a very considerable percentage of the light of distant stars before it reaches us. Trumpler, for example, suggests that in addition of fine cosmic dust and large meteors, the absorbing material in the inter-stellar spaces might consists of fine electrons or pieces of atoms that have become ionized and had some of their electrons removed, as well as free atoms of colcium, sodium and other elements.

Dr. Piet Van de Camp has recently discovered that space, far from being filled with a diaphanous and transparent ether, has appreciable density, and eats up a large percentage of the starlight coming to us from the Milky way. In a recent study of a star cluster, Trumpler has found that within the Milky way system thirty-nine per cent. of the starlight is absorbed while coming through a distance of about nineteen quadrillion miles. Van de Camp concludes that, at this rate of light absorption, a star actually 10,000 parsees distant would appear to be twenty-two times as remote as it really is.—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

Garfield and Vallandigham.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

It is a matter concerning James A. Garfield, that is little known outside the records, that he was in practical agreement with Clement L. Vallandigham in his contention that he should be tried before a civil instead of a military court on the sedition charge. In 1866 Garfield was counsel for Lambdin P. Milligan. Milligan was the Vallandigham of Indiana. He was placed under arrest by military order and tried by court-martial as Vallandigham was. That court-martial found him guilty, and the penalty was death by hanging.

It was near the close of the war, but the President approved the sentence and Secretary Stanton was insistent upon its execution. Milligan secured as his attorneys, besides General Garfield, David Dudley Field, Jere. S. Black and J. E. McDonald—a very distinguished array of attorneys, while for the government there appeared General Ben F. Butler, former Attorneys General Henry Stanberry and James Speed.

The decision of the supreme court written by Justice Davis, held that the right of trial by civil jury guaranteed by the constitution applied as well to a state of war when persons not in the military or naval service of the country were concerned, as in conditions of peace, if the civil courts were open and available. That would seem to apply to the Vallandigham case as well as to Milligan's, but that case was over and gone when this one came on to be heard. Garfield's argument in the supreme court in this case followed Vallandigham's contention very closely.

Chief Justice Chase and Judges Wayne Swayne and Miller concurred in the judgment in the case, but in a separate opinion held that martial law might be called into action under grave circumstances attending insurrection or invasion; however, it was not held by them that the facts shown in the Milligan case presented such a situation. Milligan was dismissed.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, April 18—Purely personal gossip: I have never seen Niagara falls or met a girl named Madge. A gentleman in Red Wing, Minnesota, insists I was in prison with him at San Quentin. And that I owe him $12. No one steps so gracefully as Jack Dempsey. I detest costume plays.

I had an uncle who wore a lavender waistcoat and whom everybody called "Colonel." He was a carriage painter. My grandmother called anything she didn't know by name a "thingummy." Of all the plays I saw in my youth the one I remember best is Hanlon's "Superba." I still like to scrape cake icing off the platter.

I feel tremendously sorry for Mayor Walker. I went to a Christmas matinee at the Folies Bergere three years ago with my seventy-four-year-old mother-in-law. I never face an issue. The gayest, most interesting night club ever visited was Bustanoby's uptown place.

I have never known scandal to be reported truthfully. There are invariably interpolations. In school boys used to pull a slate pencil through their teeth to see me pop out in a sweat. The only talkie I ever cared to see twice is "Trader Horn." I'm completely awed by men with Van Dykes.

For years I could read any patent medicine ad. and have all the symptoms. In Gallipolis, Ohio, most everybody addresses me by one nickname, "Dunk." I never passed through Cheyenne, Wyoming, without expecting to see a cowboy gallop through the streets shooting from both hips. If I enjoy a show I like to see it three or four times.

My favorite "hard boiled" city block is Forty-Seventh street between Broadway and Sixth avenue. The "Broadwayist" crowd is at the Palace Sunday nights. No state will amaze a stranger like Texas. I enjoy W. C. Fields clowning more than his juggling. I see spots for an hour after a flashlight.

Every time I go to an Italian table d'hote I swear never to go again. My first view of the metropolis was from a bus top, taken at the Pennsylvania station. It thrills me more today than then. My ambition in those days was to have a charge account at Altman's. Sign luncheon checks at the Claridge and be taken for a city chap.

The first literary tea I ever attended was at Dana Burnet's. And Charles Hanson Towne read a poem and told the story about Mrs. Fiske. You know, "Thank you, Mr. Electrician." I fell down the steps leaving, and tore a knee out of my Sunday pants. The man I wanted to see more than any other was Clyde Fitch. But I never did. I've always wanted to write a mystery story with the entire action in a fog on the London Strand.

I can have as much fun prowling around Grand Central as a kid at a circus. Recognition by ticket-takers and head-waiters gives me a pleasant glow. I have a waving acquaintance with a dozen policemen on Broadway and Fifth avenue. One calls me "Art." Another "Slick."

* * *

Every time I bathed the Sealyham he got away and shakes himself in the best room. I love a walk through dead leaves. And I like that cold, clammy smell of Paris at dawn. The most romantic city to me in America is New Orleans. Once a week I have a dessert of cold custard and hot chocolate cake. I drink coffee if it is served, but never ask for it. B. A. Rolfe's orchestra selections are dancy on the radio.

My chauffeur looks like the Rev. Mr. Beavin, our Episcopal rector back home. And the butler could double for Williams of Williams and Walker. I once lived in the same hotel where Lillian Russell, Lawrence D'Orsay, Edna Ferber, George S. Kaufman, Arthur Somers Roche, Anna Fitziu and Ethel Clayton lived. When my wife calls me Odd, it means I am in for it. I loathe snake hip dancing. I used to pull wings off flies when a boy.

Ben Ali Haggin is my idea of a man-about-town. Julian Johnson took me to Delmonico's the first time. We lunched with Meredith Nicholson. Whenever I hear a quartet I imagine I'm the tenor. I never remember numbers.

I do not like a tune until I hear it five or six times. One of the most picturesque elderly gentlemen in New York to my notion is Whitney Warren, the architect. When "March of the Toys" is radio cast and no one is looking, I march up and down the room. Any time I awaken in the night I begin a mental search for something to worry about. A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, April 18—Looking through yellowing records of the United States senate recently, there came to view a highly interesting and significant document.

It is a statement filed years ago by one Constantino Brumidi—an Italian soldier and artist—saying that the ceiling of the old agricultural committee room of the senate, with its elaborate portraits and allegorical presentations of agricultural themes, forms the "first specimen of the real fresco to be introduced into America."

This led to an investigation on our part of the man, Brumidi, and his work.

One has only to visit the capitol to be impressed by the work of Brumidi, who spent the last twenty-five years of his life lavishing his talent upon the gigantic task of decorating the walls of that building. In the corridors of the senate wing perhaps the genius of the man is seen at its best.

There are painted panels crowded with American flora and fauna. Each bird and flower is produced by the painter in exquisite detail. No two panels are the same; no two flowers and no two birds alike, yet there are hundreds of both.

In another corridor one will see blank panels, painted in solemn tones with only the decorative frame work about them filled in. Quite evidently it was Brumidi's purpose to embiazon all the walls with his living colors. But life was too short for the task.

He died in poverty, and in 1880 congress appropriated $200 to pay his funeral expenses. A belated payment was also made on his contract for the mighty fresco in the capitol dome, to aid a destitute daughter in Italy.

Brumidi was a naturalized American in the days when he toiled at the capitol. He came to America in 1855 to escape vengeance of a minister of state in Rome. As a national guard captain he had refused to order his troops to fire "on the people," the records say, and he served fourteen months in prison without charges or trial.

It was this incident that brought about the half-completed fresco work in the senate wing of the capitol. For Brumidi was a marked man already in Rome.

He went far with his idea of dedicating each of the senate committee rooms to its established purpose by the nature of its decorations. But the original scheme was not carried out.

Thus the appropriations committee meets in the room intended for the naval committee with its figure of Neptune and other sea-faring figures filling the arched ceiling panels.

The adjoining room, decked out with scenes of Valley Forge and other historic army scenes, which Brumidi intended for the military committee room, is also a part of the appropriations mill.

"Future American Home" Featured at Exposition

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 18—Take a peep into the American home of the future.

It's made of aluminum, glass, steel and rubber, without a stick of wood in it. It has a roof garden, but no cellar. A garage is part of it. It will come from factories, with large scale production.

This house is on display today at the architectural and allied arts exposition. Its designers are confident that it is efficiency's answer to the housing problem. They say that when things get going, anyone will be able to purchase a home, equipped with the most modern gadgets, for $4,000.

The house was designed by A. Lawrence Kocher and Albert Frey, New York architects.

The architects say that with properly standardized methods, such a house could be ready for occupancy eight days after it was started. It comes in parts that are screwed and riveted together.

It has closets that, in the language of their designer, "not even a woman can turn into cluttered-up catch-alls." The lower section is occupied by drawers. Coats and dresses are hung on a rod only a few inches below the ceiling—and a handle is attached to the rod by which it is lowered to eye level in a second.

SUPERVISES ALL HIS WORK

Best Workmen Employed, but Each Job Gets Personal Attention.

W. N. Crouso, is owner and manager of one of the oldest painting and decorating firms in the city, having been established here for 30 years in the same location 125½ South Main street.

This firm not only retails wallpaper and all kinds of painting materials but does a general contracting business in paper hanging and all interior and exterior painting.

Work Widespread

At some time or other in these long years of business Mr. Crouso has had the privilege of decorating the interiors of some of the best homes in Marion, as well as painting thousands of the exteriors of homes on most every street in the city.

Many public buildings both on the exterior and interior have been done by this decorating firm and made to stand the hard knocks of the elements by the application of their paints, varnishes and enamels.

This store was the first one to open for business on South Main street, between Center and Church street selling wallpaper and paints and was the beginning of what the public now refers to as the wallpaper district. Now most all the larger stores are within a stone's throw of Mr. Crouso's store.

Mr. Crouso attributes his long business career to honest business methods, fair prices and the very best materials that can be bought and the workmanship of the best mechanics that he can employ. He says that every piece of work done by the firm has his personal supervision

Keeps Old Customers

The way that this firm does business is responsible for his old customers standing by him and is responsible for many new ones.

He says in these days of cheap materials and poor workmanship a few dollars should not stand in the way of getting a good, first class job of painting and decorating.

This is something that is not done every day or even every year. The right kind of a painting job will last four or five years, sometimes longer, but, if a job is done with poor materials and poor workmanship the work will have to be done all over again in a year or two.

Mr. Crouso says to think these things over, and when ready to start painting or decorating to get someone who has a record of fair dealing and a reputation of doing first class work using high quality materials. Even if it does cost a few dollars more at the time, it is really good economy.

The photo above shows the interior of the living room of the J. A. Schroeter residence on East Center street. This room is 17 feet by 34 feet and the ceiling was lined with a covering of canvas and painted in semi-flat paint stippled, in a beautiful but modest shade of creamy tan. The walls are to be covered with a lining paper then papered with one of those beautiful new two-tone wallpaper patterns of 1931 design in shades of tan, blending to a tope in the figure.

Mr. Crouso carries at all times a full line of the better grade of paints, varnishes and emanels, besides handling a quality line of the best grade of wallpaper patterns and decorations.

Anyone calling at this store will get expert advise on their painting and decorating problems.

VIEW OF WORKMEN ON JOB

Above is shown a view of a modern wall paper job being done by workmen of W. N. Crouso. Note that floors and articles in the room are completely covered to prevent soiling during the paper hanging operation.

WEALTH OF AGED FOUND IN HOMES

Fifty-Two Per Cent of Ohioands 65 and Worth $5,000 Have Money Invested.

Apropos of old age pensions, recently discussed by the legislature of Ohio, is the statement from James A. Devine, secretary of the Ohio Building Association league, setting forth the fact that 42.6 per cent of all Ohioans who reach 65 years of age are worth $5,000 or more, the greater preponderance of which wealth is invested in homes.

In other words, Ohio building and loan leaders are pointing out that the majority of those who reach old age with any material wealth, have done so because at some time during their lifetime an investment was made in a home.

On the other hand, building and loan records disclose that more Ohioans are saving now than at any other time in history—that building and loan associations in this state alone have more than two million savers.

Scattered in every county throughout Ohio are savings accounts from one to 58 years of age, ranging from a few dollars to many thousands. The total amount thus amassed now stands at $1,300,000,000, all of which is in the hands of building and loan officers for home financing.

In an effort to point out how comparatively easy it is for the average person to collect a sizable fortune, building and loan leaders show that $50 monthly, laid away at the average interest rate of 5 per cent, will amount to $20,564 in 20 years. Even the family who can only save $2 weekly, in 20 years will be able to own a modest home of its own.

MAY TAX BOARDS

Eighteen States Propose Assessments on Posters

CHICAGO, Ill.—Eighteen states now have bills pending in their legislatures to tax bill boards, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, that has made a survey of such legislation.

Connecticut charges $3 a year for each sign containing 300 square feet or less, and this fee increases to $9 for signs containing more than 600 square feet, and not over 900 square feet.

Other states amending existing laws or proposing new laws designed to tax outdoor advertising at present include Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Nebraksa, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Utah, West Virginia, Delaware, Michigan and New York.

DRY LUMBER BEST

Satisfactory results can not be obtained by the use of green lumber. Nails driven into it will loosen once the drying-out process has begun and the wood starts to recede from the nail. Rickety, creaking houses are the result. Fully half the holding power of the nail is lot in this manner.

TO BUILD MEMORIAL OF GEORGIA MARBLE

Monument in Memory of Soldiers in Russian Drive To Be Erected.

A model of the distinctive memorial to be erected in Detroit in honor of the soldiers who fell in the World war's north Russian campaign has just been received by the contractors. When completed the monument will be placed in White Chapel Memorial park, in the center of a large circular plot, two rows of graves surrounding it.

Out of all the designs submitted for the tribute to the Polar Bears' fearless service, that by Leon Hermant of Chicago was selected as best typifying the spirit of the memorial. Mr. Hermant pictures in his model a polar bear with tense muscle sand menacing, outstretched head, standing guard over the heroic dead.

The polar bear will be life-size, and it, the helmet and the cross, signifying war burial, will be carved from one block of white Georgia marble. The base will be strongly contrasting polished black granite, symbolizing a fortress.

Memorial day is the date set for the services for the fifty-five gallant men who lost their lives in Siberia, and at this time it is expected that 3,000 members of the Polar Bear association will be present—their annual reunion being placed for May 29, 30 and 31.

They have experienced times in the dead of winter when furnaces have been installed in as short a time as 24 hours, in emergencies when heating plants suddenly failed to function.

Work on Many Homes

The beautiful home of Harry Barnhart on Vernon Heights boulevard is heated with an American Boiler Plate furnace installed by Bechtel & Wetzel.

They have put furnaces in a large percentage of the homes in Vernon Heights and in many cases have also done the roofing and sheet metal work on these fine homes. Another home in which they have installed an American Boiler Plate furnace is the Presbyterian parsonage on East Church street.

The list of homes, both new and old, in which they have placed furnaces might be continued indefinitely, for, according to Mr. Bechtel, they have sold at least a carload of furnaces each year since they have been in business and some years have sold as high as two carloads.

Bechtel & Wetzel have the exclusive agency in Marion for both the American Boiler Plate and Ravenna furnaces.

The heating capacity of a furnace can be determined accurately by scientific methods. The heating surface determines its efficiency.

The superiority of Boiler Plate steel furnaces is shown by comparison with a cast iron furnace of the same size.

The following figures were furnished after a careful investigation by the engineers of the warm air heating and ventilating association. The furnaces compared are an American Boiler Plate furnace with an outer drum 20 inches in diameter and a cast iron furnace with a 20 inch fire pot.

	sq in. of grate	sq in of heating sur.
Ameri. Boiler Plate furnace	192	6439
Cast iron fur.	224	4037

The heating efficiency of the Boiler Plate furnace is more than 58 per cent. greater then that of the cast iron furnace.

The office and workshop of Bechtel & Wetzel is located at the rear of 227 West Columbia street where either Mr. Bechtel or Mr. Wetzel may be reached at any time. They will gladly give estimates on the repairing of a furnace, on the cost of a new furnace, or roofing, spouting or sheet metal work of any kind.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY

BERMUDA COLONIAL ON U. S. PLAN

This Bermuda Colonial house of stucco is built on a typically early American plan in which the stepped-up chimneys strike the note typical of Bermuda.

In general outline such a house is suggestive of many of the smaller houses found on some of the old southern plantations, even to the location of the chimneys.

The exterior walls are of light stucco, and red shingle tile covers the roof. The house throughout is of the simplest construction arrangement, but is surprisingly roomy.

Across the front end of the first floor is a large living room, which has light on three sides and excellent ventilation. The two tall shuttered windows on the front open down to the level of the floor and the terrace.

To the right of the person entering the house is the dining room, to the left the living room. The kitchen connects with a rear entrance and the basement steps.

The kitchen is large enough to provide a dining alcove, convenient when meals are less formal.

Upstairs there are two large bedrooms and a bath. Both have ample closet space and are ventilated by windows on two sides.

The drawing does not indicate the upstairs windows running the long way of the house, since these are on the side opposite the entrance.

The living room end of the house should face south, in which case it will fit on almost any narrow lot. Or, if desired, the house may be rotated so that the entrance side faces the street.

In that case it would still fit on a lot 50 feet wide and 100 feet deep, although not as well as when located as shown.

The cost, owing to simple construction and elimination of outside frills, is comparatively low. Estimates range from $3,500 to $5,000, governed by the usual local factors.

Ohio 2nd in Savings in Building Loans

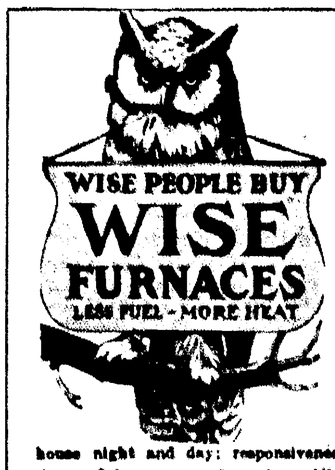
Ohio ranks second in the per capita investment with building and loan associations, according to statistical figures compiled by the United States Building & Loan league.

Eight states have more than $100 per capita in savings set aside for investment exclusively in homes, with New Jersey leading, Ohio second and Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia fourth and fifth respectively.

Figures were based on the population census and tabulation by states of assets from all building and loan associations in the country at the beginning of 1930.

2-CAR GARAGE POPULAR

Garages constructed to provide storage space for two or more cars have become popular with thrifty owners in recent years. The cost per car of building a garage for two or more cars is relatively less than for a one-car garage, and the extra space over that required by the owner can usually be rented at a substantial profit.



Heating Service

is so vital a part of home life that it transcends in importance all other home equipment and service.

Good heating service means far more than just heat—it means a large volume of comfortable warmed and humidified air moving throughout the house night and day; responsiveness; sensible fuel consumption and long years of service. All of these things are yours with a WISE warm air Furnace.
